Hello. My name is Steve Martin. I like Japanese history. I went to Japan for one week and just came back to New Zealand. Today I'm going to tell you a little about my experience in Japan.

When I was an elementary school student, my father bought me a Japanese comic book. My father studied Japanese in Tokyo when he was young. He wanted me to love Japan like him. The comic book was written in English, so I was able to read it. The book was so interesting and exciting. After reading the book, I became really interested in Japanese history and culture. I began to read a lot of books about Japan and before I knew it, I became a lover of Japan.

My father has a friend living in Tokyo. I visited him during this summer vacation. There were so many good sightseeing places there. Especially, I liked Asakusa the best. As you know, Tokyo is a very large city and its population is more than ten million. In Tokyo, there is everything. I visited some museums to see traditional art works. I also went to a lot of bookstores to buy books I wanted to read. Some bookstores are so big that you can find almost any book you want. I bought Japanese comic books written in Japanese and books about Japanese history.

While I was staying in Japan, there was one thing I was really surprised at; almost everyone was wearing a face mask all the time, everywhere. As you know, all the people in the world have been worried about a sickness, but now there are not so many people wearing masks in New Zealand. I thought the Japanese people are careful about this sickness. I hope to go to Japan again someday without a mask.

When I go next time, I will..... ///// fade out /////

1. What made Steve interested in Japan?
2. Where did Steve go to see traditional Japanese art?
3. What was Steve surprised at in Japan?
4. What does Steve hope to do?

⑥ 次の英文を読んで、後の問いに答えなさい。

Jack met Debbie at a party. She was wonderful. Jack was only one of many ①( man ) who were *chasing after her, and he was so *ordinary that nobody paid any attention to him.

At the end of the party, Jack invited Debbie to have coffee with him. She was surprised, but she agreed. They sat in a nice coffee shop. ②He [ say / to / was / nervous / anything / too ]. She was not comfortable, and she said to herself, "Please, let me go home."

As they sat *silently with their coffee, Jack suddenly asked the *waiter, "Would you please give me some salt?" Everybody looked at him. Who puts salt in their coffee? So strange! His face turned red but *still, he put the salt in his coffee and drank it. Debbie asked him, "Why did you do ③that?" Jack answered, "When I was a little boy, I lived near the sea. I liked the *taste of the sea, just like the taste of salty coffee. Now when I have salty coffee, I always think of my *childhood and my hometown. I miss my hometown so much. I miss my parents who are still living there." Debbie was deeply touched. She thought a man who could talk about his feelings must be a man who loves home and understands the responsibility of having a family. Then she also started to talk about her hometown far away, her childhood and her family.

It was a really nice talk, and also a beautiful beginning of their story. They continued to *date. Debbie found that Jack had a very kind heart.

*Thanks to his salty coffee, their story was just like a beautiful love story. Debbie married Jack, and they lived a happy life together. And, every time she made coffee for him, she put some salt in it instead of sugar, because she thought that was the way he liked it.

After 40 years, Jack *passed away. He left Debbie a letter which said,

Dear Debbie,

*Please *forgive me. Forgive the *lie I've told for my whole life. This was the only time I *lied to you — the salty coffee.*

Remember the first time we dated? Although I actually wanted some ( ④ ), I asked for ( ⑤ ), because I was so nervous. It was hard for me to change what I said, so I just went ahead.

I never thought that would be the start of our communication! I tried to tell you ⑥the truth many times in my life, but I was so afraid that I couldn't do it, as I promised never to lie to you.

Now I'm dying. I am afraid of nothing, so I can tell you the truth. I don't like salty coffee. What a strange, bad taste! But I have had salty coffee for my whole life! Since I met you, I have never felt sorry for what I did to stay with you. Having you with me is my biggest happiness. If I had a chance to live again, I would still want to know you and have you for my whole life. I would love to drink salty coffee for that.

Debbie's tears made the letter wet.

One day, someone asked her, "How does salty coffee *taste?" She answered, "It's sweet."

7 次の英文を読んで、後の問いに答えなさい。

*Hanae Mori passed away at the age of 96 in August, 2022. She was the first Japanese fashion designer who made a success in Western countries and the first fashion designer who received *a Cultural Medal in Japan.

The butterfly is one of her favorite designs and it reminds many people ( ① ) the works of Hanae Mori. She chose it for some reasons. One of the reasons was that butterflies can fly over the sea. It was a symbol of the bridge between Japan and foreign countries for her. Another reason was from her experience in New York. When she visited New York for the first time, she went to see an opera, *‘Madam Butterfly.’ It is a sad story, but she was disappointed ②to see that Madam Butterfly, a Japanese woman, looked just *miserable. She thought Japanese women are much stronger and don’t get confused or upset even in a sad situation. She decided to be a great designer to show Japanese culture and change the image of Madam Butterfly. The butterfly became her symbol of the beauty of Japanese women.

When Hanae Mori was a student, she experienced World War II. Japan lost the war, but she never lost her pride. She had a good education and she knew a lot about traditional Japanese culture. During her stay in New York, however, she was surprised to see clothes made in Japan in a department store. They were bad *quality and very cheap. Later she found out that those clothes were made in Japan to be sold at low *prices in the US. She wanted ③to show that Japan had a lot of beautiful *material and *craft workers with excellent skills. She got a lot of good material in Japan, *embroidered on it, and used many typical Japanese designs. Many people in the US and other countries thought that her works were amazing. Later she designed beautiful costumes for the opera Madam Butterfly at *La Scala in Italy.

She was invited to China and India and ④she [ ア to express / イ traditional / ウ own / エ culture / オ the people there / カ told / キ their ]. She used many kinds of materials and high-level skills of these countries to create beautiful works. She changed the image of the clothes of those countries.

She made not only *haute couture but also clothes for *the masses. She developed comfortable material made of *synthetic fiber and made good quality clothes at lower prices. She also designed uniforms for some schools in Japan and gave many young students chances ⑤to wear clothes designed by one of the top designers in the world. Many young students will *hand down the wisdom of Hanae Mori, the woman who did her best to introduce Japanese culture to the world and flew over the ocean like a butterfly to be a ( ⑥ ) across many countries.

(注) Hanae Mori : 森英恵(日本人服飾デザイナー) a Cultural Medal : 文化勲章
 ‘Madam Butterfly’ : オペラ「蝶々夫人」 miserable : みじめな quality : 質
